Additional particulars show that the emperor had a miraculous escape. There is no longer any doubt that the missiles came from a gun of the Bourse battery which was loaded with grape shot. Some bullets actually struck a little open chapel in which the emperor was standing, fairly riddling the basement windows of the palace, killing a poofficer and three marines. Had the gun been aimed a little lower the whole Romanoff dynasty might have been wiped out. All men and officers of the battery were immediately Reported a Combination Has Been

THE TEACHERS

REGULAR LITERARY MEETING WILL BE HELD.

Take Place At the Same

This afternoon the teachers' regular monthly literary meeting will be held at the High school, and following it will come the grade meetings, the latter being consolidated for the conveniences of teachers and pupils alike.

Grade meetings are held for the purpose of letting teachers keep together in their course and have proven successful in every particular. Teachers dismissed every Tuesday but in the week when the literary meeting comes, the grade meetings will be held on Friday instead of Tuesday. This prevents teachers from losing time with their classes by dismissing early two afternoons in one week, when one will answer. The literary meeting this afternoon is in charge of Prof. J. T. Ross and the following program has theen arranged:

Reading Circle. January 20, 1905. 1. Federal Education - Miss

Johnson 2. The Crusades-Miss Rook. The Rise of the Universities, Mohammed, Mohammedan Education-Mrs. Taylor. 4. The Renaisance and Humanistic Education-Miss Bonds.

5. Martin Luther and the Reformation-Miss Singleton. 6. Other Protestant Educators-

Miss Thomas. 7. The Jesuits and Their Educators-Mrs. Wilcox. 8. General discussion-Other educators of the 16th century.

Following the literary meeting will come the grade meetings and the program is as follows.

Subject for Grade Meeting Janua-

A TRUANT OFFICER.

The Lexington, Ky., schools are tendance in the public schools. The president of the board has not yet which shadows the face. Over her day for St. Louis to defend Col. Zach general council in Paducah is asked others. to pay the schools here only $35,000. It seems strange that the assessment of our own property cannot be made such as to get something like the proper amount of money for the schools. The children in many instances, now have to walk long distances to school, and some of the rooms are crowded. New schools are needed on both the north and the south sides, and they can't be built because the maximum per cent of taxes allowed under the charter does not bring money enough.

The Lexington Herald takes a sensible view of school questions and what it says of Lexington is equally true in some instances in Paducah. It declared yesterday:

"It was announced in yesterday's paper that the school board asks the city of Lexington to produce $66,000 of the school fund for the coming year. It is further announced that in estimating the expenses for 1905, the salary of a truant officer was not counted among them. We have no information beyond this statement; we believe the public has none. We tender the use of The Herald columns to the president of the school board, the superintendent of schools, or any member of the school board to further inform the public on the subjectif any one of them considers the publie worthy of this information.

"At the last session of the legislature a compulsory education law was passed, one section of which reads: "'In the first week of July each year the board of education in each city of the first, second, third and fourth classes, shall appoint one person for each three thousand pupils, or fraction thereof, to serve as truant officer, etc.' "The law is mandatory; it leaves no discretion with the school boards, unless they wish to be law-breakers. It is directory as to time; these officers should be appointed in the first week of July; if a school board fail to comply with the law at that time however, it does not invalidate the law requiring the appointment of officers; the people do not lose their right under the law to have these FALSE WORK FELL officers appointed, by that negligence of the board."

My other children pronounce the word glibly enough. When you and I first met, and even since then, you seemed not backward in speech."

"Sir, I find myself more afraid of you than I was at the beginning."

Strafford smfled, but answered: "I assure you there is no need. I may be an implacable enemy, but I have the reputation of being as stanch a friend. So tomorrow is your birthday, saddened by the fact that it is also the date of your mother's death. That is a loss for which a man in my onerous position cannot even partially atone, but it is a loss which you perhaps have not keenly felt. It seems heartless to speak thus, but the fact remains that we cannot deeply deplore the departure of what we have never enjoyed. One thing I can covenant-that you shall not hereafter know the lack of money, which is something to promise in a city of shops."

"I have never known the lack of it.

"Have you indeed been so fortunate! Well, there again you bear a resemblance to your father. Sir John was reputed comfortably off in the old days. and I infer he harbored his wealth, a somewhat difficult task in times gone by. Are you, then, his heir?"

"One of two, my lord." "Ah, yes. I had momentarily forgotten the brother who favors his grandfather rather than his sire. I am like to be overbusy tomorrow to attend the mart of either mercer or goldsmith, and if I did I should not know what to purchase that would please you. Buy what catches your fancy and flatter your father by naming it his gift. I am very tired and shall not rise early tomorrow. Do not wait breakfast for me. Good night, daughter."

"Good night, father." Although he had said the last conventional words of the day, he still stood there as if loath to retire; then he stooped and kissed her on the lips, ruffling her black wayward, curly hair, so like his own in texture, color and freedom from restraint, and patting her affectionately on the shoulder.

"You will not be afraid of me from this time forward, child?" he asked. "Indeed, Frances, I grow superstitious as I become older, and I look on your strange arrival as in some measure providential. There is none of my own kind to whom I can speak freely, as I did to you in the carriage. My daughters - my other daughters - are too young. My Lady Strafford takes much interest in her garden and dislikes this London house and this London town, for which small blame is to be imputed to her. In you a man's courage is added to a woman's wit, and who knows but my daughter may prove the re-enforcement I lacked in my baffling fight with the unseen?" "I hope I shall not disappoint you, thus." sir, though I am but a country maid, with some distrust of this great city and its court."

"City and court are things we get speedily accustomed to. Well, again good night, sweetheart, and sleep soundly. I see those fine eyes are already heavy with slumber." But sleep came not so quickly as he surmised to the eyes he had complimented. The day had been too full of rapid change and tense excitement. The strange transformation of the present, and the dim, troubled vista of the future which opened out to her, cherished thought and discouraged slumber. Was it possible that she was thus to be transplanted, was to stand by the side of the greatest man in England, his acknowledged daughter, his welcome aid? God grant she might not fall him if he had real need of her, And so she planned the days to come. She would be as subtle as the craftiest. She would cover all dislikes as the cloak had covered her, and her lips should smile though her heart revolted. Her tongue must measure what it said, and all rural bluntness should disap-

She slipped from these meditations into a hazy, bewildering conflict; her father, somehow, was in a danger that she could not fathom, she lacking power to get to him, restrained by invisible bonds, not knowing where he was, although he called to her. Then it seemed there was a turmoil in the street, a cry for help, a groan and silence, and next Mrs. Jarrett was moving about the room and had drawn curtains that let in a gray, misty day-

"is my father yet risen?" she cried. "Oh, good lack, no, your ladyship, nor will he for hours to come.'

The girl's head fell back on her pillow, and she said dreamily, "I thought there had been trouble of some sort and men fighting."

"Indeed, your ladyship, and so there was, a rioting going on all the night. I think the citizens of London are gone mad, brawling in the street at hours when decent folk should be in their beds. "Tis said that this new parliament is the cause, but how or why I do not know.'

Although the Earl of Strafford did not quit his chamber until noontide, he was undoubtedly concerned with affairs that demanded attention from the

"Is it difficult for you to say 'father?' | greatest minister of state. There wer constant runnings to and fro, messengers dispatched and envoys receiv ed, with the heavy knocker of the door constantly a-rap. It was two hours after midday when Strafford sent for his daughter, and she followed his messenger to the library, where she found her father in his chair beside a table, although he was equipped for going forth from the house. There had been sented before him De Courcy, but the young man rose as she entered and greeted her with one of his down reaching bows which set her a-quake lest he may be late before I return. Yet I think you shall sup with me at 7 if all goes well and debate becomes not too strenuous, but do not wait in case I should be detained. I counsel you not to leave the house today, for there seem to be many brawlers on the streets. Any shopman will be pleased to walt upon you and bring samples of his wares, so send a servant for those you wish to consult. My friend De Courcy, here, begs the favor of some converse with you and speaks with my approval."

Strafford looked keenly at the girl and her heart thrilled as she read the unspoken message with quick intuition. He had some use for De Courcy, and she must be suave and diplomatic. Thus already she was her father's ally. an outpost in his vast concerns now committed to her. The young man saw nothing of this, for he had eyes only for the girl. The broad rim of his feathered hat was at his smirking lips. and his gaze of admiration was as unmistakable as it was intent.

"Sir, I shall obey you in all things and hope to win your commendation,' said Frances, with an inclination of the head.

"You are sure of the latter in any case, my child," replied Strafford, ris-"And now, De Courcy, I think we understand each other, and I may rely upon you.'

"To the death, my lord," cried the young man, with another of his courtly genufications.

"Oh, let us hope it will not be necessary quite so far as that. I bid you good day. Tomorrow at this hour I shall look for a report from you. For the moment, goodby, my daughter." No sooner was the earl quit of the room and the door closed behind him than De Courcy, with an impetuous movement that startled the girl, flung himself at her feet. Her first impulse was to step quickly back, but she checked it and stood her ground.

"Oh, divine Frances!" he cried, "how impatiently I have waited for this rapt moment when I might declare to you"-"Sir, I beg of you to rise. 'Tis not seemly you should demean yourself

"Most beauteous nymph! How many grand ladies of our court would give all they possess to make such confession truly. Aye, the queen herself. 1 do assure you, sweetest, such argument will never daunt a lover."

"I implore you, sir, to arise. My father may return.'

"That he will not. And if he did 'twould pleasure him to see my suit advancing. I loved you from the first moment I beheld you, and, though you used me with contumely, yet I solaced my wounded heart that 'twas me you noticed, and me only, even though your glance was tinged with scorn."

Notwithstanding a situation that called for tact, she was unable to resist a touch of the linguistic rapier, and her eyes twinkled with suppressed merriment as she said, "You forget, sir, that I also distinguished the keeper of the hounds with my regard;" but, seeing he winced, she recollected her position and added: "In truth, I was most churlishly rude in the forest, and I am glad you spoke of it, that I now have opportunity to beg your pardon very humbly. I have learned since then that you stand high in my dear father's regard, and indeed he chided me for my violence, as 'twas his duty to do by a wayward child."

You Get Up

In the morning tired, languid, and frequently with a headache that is almost unbearable. You have been nervous, restless and sleepless night after night, and gloomy and irritable during the day. This nervous exhaustion affects the heart, lungs and other organs that depend upon the nerves for motive power. Then the stomach fails to digest the food; the heart action is weak, and circulation poor, and the kidneys and liver inactive.

What you need is not a stomach, head, kidney or liver medicine, but Dr. Miles' Nervine to soothe and feed the nerves and build nerve tissue.

"My wife was subject to severe mental strain, which resulted in nervous prostration. The first symptoms were uncontrollable crying and melancholy spells, which increased to such an extent that for over a year she would have a spell every day of from four to six hours duration. She required the constant attention of her physician and attendants. She suffered great pain and anguish. The best physicians attending her could give no relief, and she finally became almost of unsound mind. As a last resort I began giving her Dr. Miles' Nervine, and Tonic, and noticed that her spells next day were not so severe, and they gradually disappeared altogether. She has had no recurrence of the spells, and is gaining in health and strength.

THE ELKS' BUILDING MAY BE STARTED AND POSSIBLY COMPLETED.

No Definite Steps Taken, But Work is Expected to Begin in a Short Time.

It is possible and according to the statement of one of the officers in the Elks' Building association, that work on the Elks' building to be erected across from the Kentucky, where the Terrell livery stable now stands, will be started this year. It may be started soon enough to complete the handsome building before next winter.

There has been nothing definite done by the association thus far, but you prosperity, I am, yours truly, the members seem anxious to reach an understanding. It is claimed that the association has exclusive control of the matter, and will in a short time meet and avail itself of its authority to let the contract and start work.

No difficulty is anticipated in securing the necessary funds. With the cash already on hand, and the bonds, it will be easily raised.

The building will be one of the finest in the city, and once started will be constructed with all possible

Raft Broke Loose.

Charles and Henry Cole, of 'Gilbertsville Ky., yesterday arrived with a raft of logs for the Sowell mill, and report a most thrilling adventure while on their way down the Tennessee river. They attempted to slacken up the speed of the raft near the mouth of Clark's river, and the rope with which they attempted to moor it to the bank broke, with one of them on the raft. He floated helplessly down the river without means of reaching shore until his brother, who had gone ashore to tie up the raft, secured help and came after him. He was almost frozen when rescued.

A Man Sentenced to Thirty Years Married.

Peoria, III., Young Man Aroused From a Five Weeks' Cataleptic Sleep.

FORTUNE FOR SAVING A LIFE

Dixon, Ill., Jan. 20.-John H. Donavin was sentenced by Judge Farrand to serve a term of thirty years in the penitentiary at Joliet, for the murder of George Gogen, at Steward, this county, on September last. Within fifteen minutes after he had been sentenced Donavin was married to Miss Mary Elizabeth Erpelding of Huntington, Ind.

The two young people became acquainted in Chicago, where he was working as a bookkeeper, and she as stenographer. Deputy Sheriff Mc-Gowan notified the parents of the young lady of her intention to marry Donavin. The father sent word back that she was of age and could do as she pleased in the matter. Their object in being married at this time is that the young woman may be in a better position to make a fight to free her husband before he has served his term. He pleaded guilty to the crime under an agreement with the state's attorney that the death penalty would not be assessed.

He was found in his room soundly asleep, and as he could not be awakened his family at Peoria brought him back. Since then he has lain in this mysterious sleep, and was only aroused today when a battery was applied to his spinal column. One electrode was applied at the base of the brain and another to the end of the spinal column, and the full force of the battery being turned on, the patient awakened and the indications are that he will re-
